

Adviser Guide

Interdisciplinary Graduate Assistantships are opportunities for doctoral students supported by The Graduate School (TGS). They offer the chance for students to obtain academic and professional development experience, and to explore special interests in other areas.

Most of the available TGS-funded interdisciplinary GAships now share an application portal.

Adviser access:

Northwestern faculty can access the portal with their NetID and NetID Password

Adviser Guide

- Students provide the name and email of their faculty adviser/mentor in their application.
- The adviser will receive an email for each Interdisciplinary GAship application they submit.
- The adviser will not be able to see the student's application, but will have to acknowledge and affirm that the student is applying.
- Campus partners who review applications often ask for adviser acknowledgement, so TGS built it into the system.
- All adviser reviews can be accessed under Actions->Adviser Review
